Ag Leadership continues upward trajectory

By Jeff Elder (35), CALF Board Chairman and Barry Bedwell (13), CALF President

The results for our fiscal year ending June 30, 2017 were, by all measurements, positive. Thanks in large part to the leadership and stewardship exhibited by the board of directors and our previous president, Bob Gray, who retired Aug. 1, 2016, the California Agricultural Leadership Foundation began the year on solid footing, looking to build on the very encouraging trends that had been established in curriculum development, university interactions, alumni relations and fundraising. And while the year began with investment markets around the world generally languishing or flat, that too was soon to change late in the calendar year to become upbeat as well.

The Ag Leadership alumni, through the leadership of the Alumni Council, led exemplary efforts in recruiting. The program had an exceptional number of applicants for Class 48—the most in many years—if not on record. The perception and appeal of the program remain at a very high-level thanks to the work of the faculty and the curriculum that was delivered. The foundation enjoys financial constancy thanks in large part to the continued support of the Boswell and Booth foundations, in addition to increased commitments from such names as the Resnick Foundation, Taylor Farms, the California Almond Board, The Zenith, Driscoll’s and HMC Farms. In addition, alumni donations connected with such special events as the Ag Leadership Alumni World Ag Expo Breakfast, golf tournaments and clay shoots continue to grow.

Comprehensive financial information is contained later in this report and we encourage you to review it in detail. Our auditors once again issued an unqualified or “clean” opinion in that the statements present a fair representation, in all material aspects, the financial position of the foundation. In addition, there were no issues uncovered during the audit and there was no need to issue a management letter to address deficiencies. Total net assets increased, year to year, approximately 11.6% while total revenue and other gains grew at a 12.5% rate. Total expenses decreased 22.3% and net investment income increased to almost $1.8 million.

With this financial stability, we have had the ability to remain focused as to why this program was created almost five decades ago. The theme for this year’s annual report, Connect – Interact – Lead, was thoughtfully selected because in multiple ways, it is a representation and summary for both our mission as well as our vision for Ag Leadership. We communicate that our mission is: “We grow leaders who make a difference” and that our vision is “To be a catalyst for a vibrant agricultural community.”

To truly accomplish the aforementioned objectives, we understand that the approximate 1,300 alumni must be provided facilitated opportunities to take what they have learned, through the coordination by the foundation, so as to remain engaged where they can interrelate and eventually become better leaders and influencers on behalf of California agriculture.

We look forward to 2018 with continuing enthusiasm knowing that challenges clearly remain with each of the four pillars of Ag Leadership: faculty and planning for succession; curriculum with the need to remain fresh, productive and relevant; alumni and the necessity for greater interaction and engagement and resources/fundraising with the challenge to cover operating expenses and allow the endowments to grow to the goal of $25 million. Nevertheless, especially after the very productive strategic planning session that was held by the board in Nov. 2017, we are confident that together, we will be able to meet these challenges head-on and with successful results.

This is particularly true given our upcoming 50th anniversary in 2020 and the opportunities that milestone presents over the next two years. Please keep your eyes and ears open for chances to be a part of that once-in-a-lifetime event. In closing, please know that we sincerely thank each and every one of you for your support of Ag Leadership, whether it be time, talent or treasure and we are deeply appreciative to be a part of this life-changing program.

Lessons Learned in Jordan, Israel and Greece

Class 46 fellows returned from their international seminar in early November with feelings of gratitude and appreciation for the opportunity to participate in a once in a lifetime international leadership experience to Jordan, Israel and Greece.

The journey began with a trip to the Jordan River. The class walked in the steps of Jesus and John the Baptist to see the location of Jesus’ baptism. They also walked to the River Jordan on the border of Jordan and Israel and stopped at the Dead Sea, the lowest land point on Earth.

“We witnessed not only people completing a very personal spiritual journey with their baptism, but saw this happening alongside the armed border guards from both nations. There was a significant difference in the sides of the location with the Jordanian site being simple and rather humble in nature.” - Class 46 International Seminar Blog

Part of the seminar included delivering $250,000 worth of medical equipment and supplies to a Jordanian hospital in need of help. The project was made possible through a partnership with Community Medical Centers (CMC), Tim Joslin, CEO and president of CMC and Dr. Berj Apkarian, CMC’s vice president of physician relations. Dr. Apkarian—who travelled with the class on their mission to deliver the supplies—is also the First Honorary Counsel of the Republic of Armenia in the United States.

After the class crossed the border into Israel, they traveled into the West Bank and visited the Latin Patriarchate of Jerusalem. The school is Christian-based with a Muslim and Christian student population. The class participated in small group discussions with eleventh grade students and heard about their struggles. The students openly shared about living in an area under occupation.

While in Israel, the class stopped at the Alrowwad Cultural and Theater Society situated on the Aida Refugee Camp in Bethlehem, Palestine where 6,000 refugees reside. The needs are vast in the camp where two-thirds of the population are under the age of 24.

In Jerusalem, the class learned about the historical significance of the city to many faiths. The class visited the Wailing Wall where they witnessed people presenting their prayers to the wall. The fellows of Class 46 also visited the Muslim side of the Old City, where they viewed the exterior of the Dome of the Rock and learned about the significance of the site to Muslims.

The class met with two representatives from the U.S. Consulate in Jerusalem regarding Israeli/Palestinian relations. Topics included the aid packages given to both regions from the U.S., refugees, farming, economic status and the future.

On their way to Athens, the fellows stopped at the Sorek Desalination Plant south of Tel Aviv, on the Mediterranean. This facility is the largest sea water reverse osmosis plant in the world and provides 28% of the potable water for Israel’s municipalities. In 2014, Israel had its most historic drought in recorded history. Because the Sorek plant came online in 2013, the impacts of the drought were not felt by most of Israel’s population.

On their first day in Athens, Class 46 fellows found themselves focused on the rich history of the beautiful, ancient city. They visited the Roman Arch; the Temple of Zeus; Acropolis Hill; the Parthenon and the Erechtheion. At the U.S. Embassy, the group learned about migration and refugee issues and the Greek economy.

For more lessons about the Greek financial crisis, the fellows met with macroeconomist, Yannis Palaiologos. His insight and expertise into the events leading up to the Greek financial crisis gave the group a local perspective of the situation. Fellows also met with a panel of professors and students at the Agricultural University of Athens to discuss a variety of agricultural topics, political influences and water resources.

“While our international seminar has concluded, there is a great amount of emotional processing that will continue to take place amongst all fellows. The relationships that we have built between classmates and international connections will be life-long and unforgettable. We are incredibly fortunate to have had this profound experience. Each Class 46 fellow is overwhelmed with immense feelings of gratitude and appreciation for the experiences that we have had. We must remind ourselves of the lessons that were learned and continue towards a process of life-long learning.” - Class 46 International Seminar Blog
Lessons Learned in Washington, D.C. and Baltimore

In early March 2017, Class 47 fellows traveled to the East Coast for their national seminar. The experience included meetings with top-level government, business and community leaders who provided a valuable extension to the study of state and national issues. The national seminar was also an opportunity for the fellows to study leadership throughout the history of our country and to promote engagement at community, state and national levels.

The seminar began in Maryland with a visit to Intersection of Change in Baltimore. The fellows met with Elder CW Harris, pastor and founder of Newborn Community of Faith Church. Intersection of Change is a nonprofit that provides support and leadership to the socially and economically disadvantaged Baltimore communities of Sandtown-Winchester and Upton.

In Gettysburg, fellows learned about the history of the area by discussing how decisions made under the stress of conflict test team dynamics and personal conviction. With the help of a licensed battlefield guide, fellows learned about one of the most contentious times in our nation’s history and the influential leaders involved in the conflict. The guide led fellows through several critical decisions and interpersonal interactions that were key to the outcome of the Battle of Gettysburg.

The fellows also discussed the impact our nation’s leaders have during times of conflict.

“The strongest personality guiding the nation during this difficult time was Abraham Lincoln. President Lincoln addressed the nation on several occasions attempting to unite and heal a divided nation. Class 47 reviewed and analyzed, line by line, a few of the most impactful public addresses to the United States of America—Lincoln’s two inaugural addresses as well as his Gettysburg Address. The exercise and day culminated reviewing the inaugural speech of our nation’s newest president.”

- Class 47 National Seminar Blog

The seminar continued with discussions about how trust and compromise are critical components to progress. During their meetings with experts on immigration law, the class learned about how labor issues differ from the East Coast to the West Coast.

In Washington, D.C., the fellows met with three White House Fellow alumni who served in the White House over the past few presidencies—two in the vice president’s office and the third in the Department of Defense. At the National Defense University, fellows discussed global food security, technology, innovation, research, human capital challenges, globalization, regulation and trade with students at the Eisenhower School.

Meetings in Washington, D.C. continued with American Chemistry Council CEO Cal Dooley (13) and Congressmen Jimmy Panetta, Devin Nunes (29), Jim Costa, Jeff Denham and David Valadao. The topics of discussion included policy making, immigration, water, the farm bill and trade. Fellows also met with Sen. Dianne Feinstein and her staff to discuss water issues and bipartisanship.

The national seminar concluded with the D.C. Exchange reception at the USDA. Fellows met with CALP alumni, D.C. Exchange applicants and members of the Oklahoma Agricultural Leadership Program.
The national trip is one that I will remember and cherish forever. Personally, the highlight came when we had an hour spent with Justice Kennedy in the Supreme Court. The overall experience was amazing.

The L4 Seminar has further educated us, provoked our thoughts and challenged us to do more to make a difference. The essential value of qualified leaders discussed here today serves to reinforce the incredible value of leadership training like that provided by the California Agricultural Leadership Program.

I have had the good fortune to learn much during my association with CALF. That hasn’t slowed down with my transition from being in the program to serving on the board.

As a graduate of Class 13, like almost all other former participants, I looked at the time I spent with Ag Leadership as one that was not only educational but also a transformational life experience. Even with the passage of over three decades in time, there weren’t many days that went by that I didn’t feel some connection to the program, either through classmates, other alumni or simply taking what I had learned to address the challenges in my career and life.

In Class 30, I began to reflect on how my background, cultural norms and interactions with people of other cultures shaped me into the person that I am. Over the years, I have continued to reflect—as the program has changed—to provide more introspection for the core faculty and for the fellows.

I credit Ag Leadership with helping me develop a much more effective leadership style and approach to problem solving—both in terms of dealing with people and projects. I’m looking forward to this chance to give back to and in participating in the development of the people who are coming after me in the program.

What you get initially are the teachings and the self-growth and self-awareness. Secondary to that are the relationships and the opportunities to meet people and interact with people on a deeper level that allows you access to resources and great friends. You get to learn from all these amazing people and create really deep friends as well—I don’t think you can get that anywhere else.

It was very evident to me within the first couple of days of this year’s D.C. Exchange Program that California’s agricultural leaders in Regions 3, 4 and 5 made a sound investment in educating the hard working and knowledgeable people working on their behalf back in Washington, D.C. Kudos to everyone involved in making this event an annual success and promoting its benefits into the future.

As regional director, I hope to bring the alumni from Region 1 together to remember the impact Ag Leadership had upon them and to call upon them now to make their impact.

I feel the call to give back to this program that has given me so much.

I would rank my Ag Leadership experience as one of the top five in my life. I want to see the organization grow ever stronger, influencing agricultural leaders for generations to come.

I have been fortunate to be able to assume leadership positions on many levels. I attribute this to my experience and the residual benefit that the Ag Leadership program has provided me. I would like to stay involved to continue my learning and to play whatever part I can to sustain this wonderful experience and opportunities for others in the future.

The California Agricultural Leadership Program was instrumental in helping me develop my potential as a husband, father, community leader and industry professional.

This is a commencement—somebody must think we have attained something. The use of this word, commencement, signals that the same group that believes we have attained something believes that something for us is just beginning.

As director, I hope to bring the alumni from Region 1 together to remember the impact Ag Leadership had upon them and to call upon them now to make their impact.

I feel the call to give back to this program that has given me so much.

The program gave me a chance to find out where I was and to grow as a person and a leader. I grew in a way that I never could have imagined. Our journey as leaders is just beginning.

We had to create bonds, listen and trust our classmates which is imperative through the Ag Leadership process. Becoming a support team for each other aids in the ability to have a safe place, be vulnerable, get outside of our box and ultimately grow into respected leaders.

Learning how to trust each other early helps a fellow find ways to becoming more open in the process. Trusting my colleagues is what allowed me to open up to the process of learning about myself. When the process got difficult in some of the seminars, I could count on them to help get me through.

The program gave me a chance to find out where I was and to grow as a person and a leader. I grew in a way that I never could have imagined. Our journey as leaders is just beginning.

Going through CALP is a gift. A strong alumni network helps maintain a strong agricultural community. The more alumni, the greater the network to help educate about our diversity in agriculture in California. The more that the Alumni Council can open those opportunities and provide a path, I believe the more people will get involved.

CALP has impacted me in so many ways. It made me realize the importance of interconnectedness and the interdependence we have on each other in our industry and on the human family as a whole. It has given me a passion for making a real difference in my community every day and in everything I am involved in.

It provided me with a broader understanding of the world and not just my little space on Earth. I have a better understanding of how we are linked together in very profound ways.

I have really tried to embrace the concept of ‘servant leadership’. It was one of the early concepts we learned within the program and I believe it to be absolutely foundational to both the program and to my professional life.

Ag Leadership brought me into contact with many people I would not have interacted with otherwise. It trained me to keep considering the big issues that were beyond the problems at hand.

Ag Leadership opened my eyes up to other things in the world and helped me see that what we have here is so nice compared to what other people around the world are dealing with. It helped me understand that everyone deals with problems in different ways. It has helped me to be more patient and to see and consider other points of view.
